

VINOBA'S VOICE

IN

MADRAS CITY

on 17th, 18th & 19th May 1956

Sarvodaya Prachuralaya,
(Akila Bharat Sarva Seva Sangh)

TANJORE

[Price Rs. 4

The Co-operative Press, Limited, Tanjore.

V-2-m-94

904

Bhoodan Series E. 13/37,000

Acharya Vinoba Bhave was accorded truly affectionate and reverential welcome by all classes of citizens of Madras in his three days' sojourn on Bhoodan Mission in the city on 17th, 18th and 19th of May 1956. Summarised versions of his Hindi speeches delivered on the different occasions are are given in this book-let under the following heads:

1. Serve Thy Neighbour
2. Pay Labour its price
3. Have Faith in God
4. Be Selfless Workers
5. Call to Businessmen
6. Bhoodan - the Cure of World Ills
7. Appeal to Writers for Buddhi-dan
8. Call to the Rich

Tanjore	}	Sarvodaya Prachuralaya (Akhila Bharath Sarva Seva Sangh)
26th May 1956

संदर्भ विभाग

V-2.M.96

SERVE THY NEIGHBOUR

Vinobaji's first speech in the City of Madras is at Perambur where he reached in his Tamil Nad tour at 7-30 in the morning on 17th May, 1956. The following is a condensed report of his speech at the 'Unity House' where a record gathering assembled to hear him.

THE Bhoodan movement besides receiving and distributing lands, also aims at making people to think and work for the good of others. India is an ancient land with a civilisation of its own. But I feel sorry that people living herein are not all following the right path and thinking in the right way. The greatness of land, is not proportional to its area or population. It is judged by the greatness of the people living therein. If the people living in the country are great, the country automatically becomes great. Hence it must be the aim of the people to lead a righteous life and make the community good, and in turn the country great. Only if the people are large-minded the nation will prosper and she will be respected by other countries. The people should try to think in terms of the community and must work for raising the status of the community.

When the heart becomes large the welfare of the community will increase. When the welfare of the community increases the prestige of the nation is automatically raised.

The people should have a mind to do good to the community in which they live and only then they can be called 'great'. Mere numbers will not do. Take the case of few insects around a piece of candy; one can find the insects taking away as much of the candy as possible for its own self not minding the welfare of its neighbour. Human beings should not lead such a life and they must think of the good and welfare of the community in which they live and of which they form a part. Service for the neighbour should be the motto.

In towns each man is mindful of his own work and does not know what happens to this friend next door. This is a sorry state of affairs. Fortunately the situation in villages is different. There the people are living in harmony with each other and have a greater feeling of responsibility towards their neighbours. A life without love towards neighbour is no life at all.

We must take a vow not to enjoy anything in life without sharing it with our neighbours or with those who are ill-placed in life. Even a young boy of eight or nine years can play his role well in life and if he does not have anything to share with others he can at least spin half an hour or so a day and give away the yarn so spun to others not so well placed in life. As a child whenever I went to my mother for food in the morning, she used to ask me whether I had watered the TULSI plant and if my answer was in the negative she used to refuse me food. She gave me food only after I offered THIRTHAM to the TULSI plant. The training I had received from my mother stood me well in my later life.

There is no limit for DANS and one should not stop after making DANS once or twice. We must make it a principle to go on making DANS as often as possible and there is no limit fixed for DANS."

PAY LABOUR ITS JUST PRICE

In the predominantly workers' area of Perambur to a gathering of 10,000 mostly railway workers and their families, Acharya Vinoba addressed as follows:

“ Prayer creates a unity of hearts which is very essential. Where there is no realisation of the beauty of prayer there will be no compassion. And the human heart becomes hardened and cruel and the springs of charity get dried up. Life loses all its beauty. Slowly but steadily life has now become ADHARMIC. Money has become the supreme deity in these days.

I am happy I am entering the city through this workers' area because I am a worker all my life. I find happiness in different forms of manual labour.

The life of the poor is full of toil. It is not a matter for regret. The matter for sorrow is that in other peoples life there is no 'Sharm' (Toil). He is really fortunate who labours and works hard. He will be happy. Our present social order has become so catastrophic that those who ought to be happy are in fact those who grieve. The majority of people work out of necessity, and not out of love for labour. This is unfortunate.

Gifts of nature like air, water and land have begun to have a price. Just as horses and cows are sold, boys are also being sold. A youth with a B. A. degree is known to fetch a bigger dowry. This is regrettable state of affairs. Wherever I go especially in cities I am sad to observe this state of affairs.

In cities we see labourers pulling huge carts heavily laden. We do not often feel sorry because we are used to such sights. The matter for sorrow is that we do not show respect to labour and labour does not get its just economic rewards.

The workers in the cities are the real kings of the cities. They are the deities worthy of worship. We must show them the respect that is due to them. We must emulate them in our lives. We must so fashion our life that some form of manual labour will be present in it. Labour must be paid its just price. That is the message of Bhoodan. The ideal of Bhoodan is that every man must have an opportunity to do farming and to enjoy working in the open air. That is why I have raised the problem of the workers because it is a fundamental problem. And that is also the reason why I am so happy that I have entered Madras city through the Workers' quarters.

One friend asked me today, "We are all labourers. Do you want Sampatti Dan from us also?" I said; "I have come only to give you and not take from you. I do not want to take from such people but it is their duty—their DARM— to give. Without that their life will be worthless.

If we look at those who are better off than ourselves, we feel sad and inferior. But it is only by looking at those who are worse placed than ourselves that we develop love and compassion. Some people ask why I accept land gifts from smaller people. They even ask why Vinoba has become so cruel and exacting. I want lands from the poor so that the status of the poor may be raised. There is no human being without an element of compassion in him.

I want that we should establish an empire of love. We must realise the dignity of labour and feel sorry for those who do not work. We must go forward to help those who are not so well placed as ourselves."

At the end of the prayer meeting Sampatti Dan from 1600 people mostly workers residing at Perambur and in the surrounding areas to a total of Rs. 53,347—15—9 was announced.

A large number of people, including many ladies who had bought copies of Acharya's book on Gita, queued in front of Vinobaji who autographed the copies.

II

Have Faith in God

Addressing the gathering at the Government House Estate, at 8 A. M., on the 18th Acharya Bhawe said :

“ The excellent verses recited by the Bajan party has impressed me most. We should have faith in God and should not cling to worldly things. No mission will be fulfilled without faith in God. I would not have been able to conduct this Bhoodan movement if I had not had the required faith in Him. Many of you have accompanied me in this walk. There is an ancient saying that if ‘ we walked seven paces along with a good person, we become the friend of that person ’. So we have all become friends now. I consider you all as my best friends who are also participating in this mission. Those of you who followed me in this Yatra, are all my companions in the mission. Wherever I go I get volunteers and I do not complain that volunteers are not forthcoming for doing work. Our mission should be service to all. We should wipe away envy and selfishness from us. If this is done there need be no fear that volunteers will not be forthcoming. I am confident you will all help me to fulfil my mission.”

Be Selfless Workers

Addressing about hundred bhoodan workers from all over the city at the Government Estate, Mount Road, Acharya Bhawe said :

" I feel sad when I see that there is a dearth of selfless public workers now-a-days. In the struggle for freedom, many people made great sacrifices. At that time, they never dreamt of any return for their service. Even after the advent of freedom, people did some public service but they got some return for it generally. I feel that people now do public service expecting some help from the Government and not in a spirit of sacrifice. I do not mean to say that every one is like that. There are people who do not expect any material benefit for themselves but expect some help for their organisations or support in elections. They fail to realise there is particular joy in doing service for the sake of service. For instance take the case of children. Children derive peculiar pleasure in playing. Many good things come out of playing. They get good appetite, eat well, and grow up. They are not aware of the benefits that will accrue from playing. They derive particular pleasure in the play itself. Just like children, our people should do public service without expecting any return. Then only they will taste genuine pleasure.

Some congress men once offered to work in the Bhoodan movement. They did really some good work. The Bhoodan workers spoke appreciatively of them. But these congress workers were not satisfied with it. They wanted the Bhoodan workers to give their appreciation in writing. Perhaps they wanted to make use of that letter by showing it to some congress committees in order to get nomination for election. I wonder if these congress men had any real pleasure in service. No mission will succeed if the workers do not do selfless service. Without selfless workers no society will be respected.

All people irrespective of party affiliation should participate in the Bhoodan movement. There are in the movement workers belonging to congress, P. S. P., and other parties. They should not work with a belief that the contribution they make in the Bhoodan movement will correspondingly strengthen their own parties or other own chances of success in election.

While working the Bhoodan movement the workers should have a clear idea of the aim of the movement. There are some who ask why they should collect land gifts and why not effect land reform by legislation. They also express a doubt if the lands received in Bhoodan are all good cultivable land and state that better results may be had by legislation. Here I would like to give an analogy of the mother caressing the child gently patting on the back. Supposing the child does not sleep, will it be proper for the mother to beat the child? If she does so the result will be even worse. The ideal of the Bhoodan movement is not mere distribution of land but distribution with love. The aim is to develop a feeling of love among the members of the society. The object will not be achieved by taking aggressive steps.

If we legislate and take away the lands from the owners it will create enmity. I received a letter from the Japan Sarvodaya DOBOKAI (Brotherhood) criticising the legislation for land reform. In that letter it is mentioned that though land was distributed in Japan by legislation it had not contributed to the welfare of the society. It has created bickerings and quarrels between the land-lords and tenants. The same is true of their social structure. They in Japan have abolished caste system by law. But in reality as many as three million out-caste people are having the worst time even now there.

Social reform should be evolved by the strength of the people. After the achievement of the Independence it has become a habit with our people to look to Government for every thing. It is a very bad psychology, and has to be corrected. People will not receive much strength from reform brought out by legislation. Reforms should have spiritual force behind and only then will society benefit and progress by it. The Bhoodan movement has such a spiritual force. We call it a revolutionary movement because we want to bring about a change of heart in the people.

Public workers should not seek power. Once they are placed in the power their strength will go down. Some persons still plead that Jai Prakash Narayan should enter politics. Sri Jai Prakash is a widely read man and he knows what a revolution is. After learning the history of the countries like Russia, China and America he has realised that while in power one's strength diminishes. Though we have chosen our own Government we should not always look to it for every thing. To the extent the people develop their own power of doing things for common welfare the dependence on Government will decrease.

Call to the Businessmen of Madras city

Addressing a meeting of the members of the various Chambers of Commerce on the 18th evening Vinobaji said :

“ It is usual for Bhoodan workers to expect from rich merchants like you only ‘ Samppatti Dan ’. They do not seem to realise that in these days one cannot hope to have something from the merchants without giving them something in return. Therefore, it is necessary that the Bhoodan movement must be in a position to give to the merchants some specific message. In fact the outlook of the members of the business community is so much utilitarian that even the newspapers have to devote one whole page for their benefit exclusively if businessmen were to read them. Even then businessmen read only the “ commerce page ” in the daily newspapers and hardly ever glance at the other pages. Nowadays they scan yet another page, published weekly in some newspapers, in which the ‘ weekly predictions ’ are given out. By and large, it is only these two pages that interest the business community at large. They are not interested in anything else. In fact, what else can you expect of them ! The members of the business community are so busy round the clock that they hardly get even five minutes for their meals. I have known several cases where merchants finish off their food hurriedly in a matter of minutes and I have often wondered how they managed to spend practically their whole life-time earning money without even having time to take their food. The members of the business community seem to be sacrificing everything throughout their life and one wonders for whose sake they are making such heavy sacrifices!

No businessman will ever take a step without full consideration of the pros and cons of the issues involved. This trait of analysing fully the implications involved in any step has its own merits; but it has some defects too. While this would prevent mistakes being committed in haste, it very often results in good actions being taken belatedly. There are some who are harsh critics of the business community. I do not share those views. I have said on many occasions that there are two types of businessmen in our country. There are some with generous hearts, full of devotion and compassion. There is yet another section which is prone to be shrewd and intelligent. Very often those in the second category lack a human touch. But apart from these two types, there are no other types among businessmen. For example, you cannot find a businessman who is devoid both of compassion and intelligence.

I have always maintained that members of the mercantile community are bound to evince a keen interest in our movement provided the right approach was made to them. But there are many who criticise them. As I said I do not share those views. If members of the business community do not live up to the code of conduct enjoined upon them by our Dharma shastras, it is only symptomatic of the general fall that has come about in our society all round. Therefore I am not prepared to say that it is only the merchants that have fallen from the high standards expected of them. Yet why are they being singled out for this all round criticism? There must be some reason behind it.

As far as I can see our Dharma Sastras have chalked out a code of conduct and a path of duty for every section of our society and if members of the business community in India are the target of any criticisms it is only because they have swerved from this path.

I have given expression to this complaint before and a big businessman has written to me accepting this criticism as correct. I am yet to send a reply to his letter. We are confident that this lapse on their part would soon be made up and that they will ere long realise their onerous responsibilities and discharge them satisfactorily. They do not lack intelligence and once the lapse on their part is brought home to them, they will succeed in making it up and thus be of real service to the community at large.

We are not conducting this movement merely to collect some money from you all. Even if you offer any such donation, I am not in the habit of accepting it. What I want is that if there are five members of your family, I want you to accept me as the sixth member. What I am anxious is that you must spend your riches for the benefit of society, on the lines enunciated by this movement. It is enough if at the end of each year, you render accounts as to how much you have managed to earn by your trade and how much you have spent for the benefit of society. I do not want you to run away with the impression that once you give some donation to this movement. your duty is over. In fact, the Tamil phrase koduthuvittu is hardly applicable in this context. What is contemplated by this movement is a kind of a marriage between those who come under its spell and the great ideals it seeks to spread. You know there cannot be any separation once there is such a happy marriage, and the merchants are wedded to these ideals."

I only want to be accepted as a member of your family who will act more as the prompter of of your conscience reminding you constantly of your duty to the community as a whole and serving generally as a beacon of light showing you your straight path of duty."

Bhoodan – The cure for world Ills.

To a vast multitude of a well disciplined concourse of men and women, in lakhs, Vinobaji delivered this post prayer speech at the Island Ground in Madras on 18th Evening.

“I have made attempts to learn all the National languages of India. But I have not attained fluency in any of the South Indian languages so as to be able to address public meetings. During my sojourn in Vellore Jail twelve years ago I studied four south Indian languages at a time. I request I may be excused for my inability to address you all in Tamil.

The constitution has listed fourteen national languages. But there are eighteen spoken languages according to some. The famous south Indian poet Subramania Barathi has said, “India, though speaking eighteen languages, has achieved unity of thought.”

I am deeply moved by the great affection shown to me by the people of Tamil Nad. This is proof that they look upon me as one among them. The universal response is astonishing. Every one of the foreigners who are watching the progress of the movement has asked me why this response is so universal. I tell them ‘my approach to the masses is the approach of a tender and innocent child to its mother. Will any mother dare displease and disappoint her child? This approach is the key to the success of this movement.

No one has so far refused me Bhoodan. Some might have donated small extents of land and others large extents. But there is no out-right refusal so far. Still I cant deny there are some "doubting Thomases" here and there. A certain news-paper has reported that I was being given arid and uncultivable lands and thereby cheated. That note has also urged distribution of land through legislation. I have, of course, received all kinds of lands—good and bad, but it is wrong for me to refuse a land gift on the ground that it is arid land. Just as an ocean receives all kinds of water flowing into it—Ganges water as well as sewage water—so also all kinds of lands come into my hands. I am not in the least worried about the quality of the lands donated. What I am concerned with is the criticism that I am being cheated, and therefore the Government should undertake the work. I may point out here that if it is possible to cheat Bhave then it is easier to cheat the Government. If my appeal brings both good as well as a bad lands I am sure Government action will bring only bad lands.

If anybody doubts my remark against the Government he need only look at the things happening today. Government has been publicising during the last four or five years their intention to undertake land reforms. This wide publicity has not served any purpose except to give breathing time to land-owners to distribute their property among the members of their family and to defeat the object of the Government's legislation when it comes.

But with my approach of love and sincerity the result will be different. Man can cheat others but never his own conscience. I have faith in innate human nature which is pure and shiny. Faith moves mountains. The exterior of man may be rotten by force of circumstances but the purity of the interior is intact. That is why our Sastras have said that no man is a sinner. Society is like a Kamadhenu and we can realise our ambition provided there is right approach. That is why I have no doubt that the Bhoodan Yagna will achieve what legislation or violent revolution can never achieve.

Look at the picture of the United Nations, which is torn by mutual distrust. Distrust produced cold-war. The Western Nations have piled dangerous weapons and spent all their money on arming themselves to the teeth. But these accumulations of the Hydrogen bombs, far from solving their problems have brought the world to the brink of catastrophe. It threatens to destroy the world and every nation today is enveloped in fear and suspicion. The world is therefore eager to find some peaceful method to solve its problems.

I am not referring to a set of people who claim themselves to be "Non-violent" but in reality use the slogan of Non-violence to cover earnest desire to maintain status quo. They are the people who talk love of gradual and slow progress. These self-styled peace lovers are the real enemies of progress and should be equated with believers in violent revolution to change the order of the society.

A violent revolution may destroy the existing order of the society. But it will never change the hearts of men. And as long as there is no change of heart poverty and inequalities will never be obliterated, and there will be no real peace. This is what I said to a group of Communists who approached me for my signature to the 'Peace Appeal' of the 'Peace Council'. Real peace can never be purchased by a signature campaign. The key is in Bhoodan Yagna. And some of them went away convinced by my views. Similar is the conviction brought in some Communists in Andhra.

I believe that the faith of the Big Powers in the violent methods is now shaken. That is why the Russian leaders visited India and Britain. But I am sorry to say that they do not believe in the efficacy of Non-violence. This has left them without an alternative, and now they are in a quandary.

India with her traditional culture woven round the force of love is in a pre-eminent and privileged position of demonstrating the success of non-violence as a key to change the present order of the society and end poverty and inequality. If we who attained our political independence in a unique way usher in a new society through Bhoodan we will save not only India but show a way to the whole world.

My appeal to the people of Tamil Nad is special. I look up to them to crown the movement with success, for did not Dravidistan keep alive devotion to God even when it disappeared from other parts of India? I have faith in you. Though I do not claim spectacular progress of the movement yet I say it has caught the imagination of the masses. They are full of hope and soul force will never fail.

People from a country without adequate land should be invited by another with land to spare. Other countries are watching with keen interest our experiment. In particular in Japan where Government distributed all available lands there is bitterness in villages and that is why Japan is now interested in the Bhoodan movement.

Bhoodan movement is founded on the rock of love and universal brother-hood of man. We in India should make a start towards our ultimate goal of oneness of the world by considering ourselves as Indians first. We must raise above parochial and caste distinctions. Bhoodan knows no language except the language of love.

Once again, I appeal to you, the people of Tamil Nad, to crown the movement with success."

III

Appeal to Writers for Buddhi-dan

On 19th morning at the Dakshina Bharat Hindi Prachar Sabha this meeting was specially held for the benefit of writers and journalists. Acharya Bhawe said :

“ I know you don't have wealth. But you do have intelligence, you have the power of expression. I want you to give to this movement a sixth part of these gifts of yours.

If I can get that from you, I can accomplish many things. You may give me a sixth part of your creative power and retain for yourself the remaining five-sixths. Your greatness, your reputation will not become any the less if you give away a sixth of your powers.

You are all creative artists. You do not keep your great thoughts to yourselves. You cannot but share your creative thoughts with others. When you get something exalted, you have to share it with others and dance with joy. You are like the man who creates a garden, takes pride in the fact that fruits are grown in his garden and shares the fruits with his neighbours. Surely none would derive real enjoyment, if he kept all the fruits grown in his garden to himself ; a man doing that would not be human—he would be classed as donkey !

The movement for Bhoodan and Sampattidan is really a revolution in our national life. In the nature of things, we have to share wealth with others, but the social system that now obtains is full of differences between man and man.

The value of money which most people worship, sharply fluctuates with the passing years. A rupee which two years ago fetched four seers of a commodity now fetches only two seers of it. And it is on the basis of so un-steady a medium that we now have to order our economic life !

Surely that is wrong. If a useless man comes to our house, we can accommodate him and somehow carry on. But if the useless man were to be made the manager of our concern, things will immediately begin to go wrong. So also money with its lack of steady value is a bad manager of our economic lives.

Once a friend of mine promised to dedicate himself to public service after earning Rs. 10,000. When he achieved his ambition I called upon him to come over for service. The friend replied that the value represented by the Rs. 10,000 on the date when he made the declaration would now correspond to a lakh of rupees !

With inflated money, man loses faith in himself. The general idea in life among most now seems to be to grab as much money as possible.

It apparently will not leave even litterateurs alone ! Government are offering prizes and money gifts—say a sum of Rs. 2,000—for the best writers.

I may ask how much money was given to Tulsidas for his Ramayana ?

So man's natural dharama is to share his wealth with others. That dharma has been lost in the world of today. The present position has to be changed and the original dharma restored. That is the principal aim of the Bhoodan movement. Our life has to change.

I request you the writers to give one sixth of your creative effort for 'this Yagna'. I know it is impossible to give just one-sixth. I know that if you decide to give, you will give everything. Otherwise you will not give anything. The writer's mind is not like that of the bania ; writers do not calculate profits and losses. If they give, they give everything ; otherwise they give nothing.

So when I ask you to give me one-sixth of your power of thought and expression, I also know that the five sixths that remain will be something without substance ; that in the one-sixth that you give, you would give everything you have.

On entering Tamil Nad, I was received with Purana Kumbha. That was significant. I was not received with pots only one-sixth full !

Tamil Nad is the southernmost part of India ; it seems to represent finality, fulfilment. I hope that the new revolution I am leading will find its fulfilment here in Tamil Nad."

Call to the Rich

On the 19th evening to a large gathering in the premises of the Dakshina Bharath Hindi Prachar Sabha, in the last post prayer meeting in the city of Madras, Vinobaji said:

“ In My early years I abandoned the college education in quest of peace. I wanted to sacrifice everything and decided to go to the Himalayas. But I had an occasion to meet Gandhiji. After my talk with Bapu I felt that what I desired to get by doing penance at the foot of the Himalayas, I could achieve by remaining in Gandhiji's ashram. As an inmate of Gandhiji's Asram I found that it was my duty to serve the people and in that service I found complete peace of mind. When Bapu was alive I was keeping aloof from the world.

This life of seclusion continued even after Gandhiji's death, until I was thrown in the midst of the masses. How it happened, I myself do not know. I cannot say how the Bhoodan idea came to me. When I went to Telengana to see things for myself through mass contact in my Sarvodaya work, a person came to me and donated 100 acres of land. From that time onwards I found that if I approached the people with love and faith I was sure to succeed in Bhoodan. As long as the heart of the people is behind this work there is no apprehension about its success.

Land hunger is similar to the hunger of a child. Just like milk flowing from the mother to the crying and hungry child, so also surplus land will go to the landless.

This Bhoodan movement is based on Dharma. The circumstances in the country is also favourable. One thing is clear to me and that is I should follow the path of non-violence to achieve the objective. The times have changed and our people have realized the need of the hour. The change in the circumstances can well be seen if you recall to your mind that incident which happened in the life of the Buddha in a village in Uttar Pradesh 2500 years back. That was a time when people of the village could not get a piece of land for the Buddha except in return for gold coins sufficient to cover the entire piece of land they wanted. So the target of 5 crores of land set before us is not high. I am confident I will be able to reach it.

I am glad there is already a good gesture on the part of big land holders in some parts of the country where they have taken an active interest in the movement. I hope more and more such persons will come forward not only to secure land gifts but also distribute Bhoodan lands to the poor.

All India Bhoodan

Received and Distributed till 30-4-'56

Name of Province.	Land Collection Acres.	Land Distribu- tion Acres.
1. Bihar ...	24,42,238	1,00,490
2. Uttar Pradesh ...	5,81,403	72,323
3. Rajasthan ...	3,78,927	20,308
4. Utka! ...	2,55,029	41,378
5. Madhya Pradesh ...	1,44,969	43,838
6. Hyderabad ...	73,965	37,044
7. Madhya Bharat ...	55,509	2,378
8. Andhra ...	50,754	...
9. Tamil Nad ...	47,092	4,582
10. Gujarat ...	44,252	10,886
11. Sourashtra ...	31,045	6,557
12. Kerala ...	28,565	1,441
13. Punjab - Pepsu ...	15,614	1,026
14. Bengal ...	11,617	2,202
15. Delhi ...	9,388	151
16. Mysore ...	9,065	100
17. Vindhya Pradesh ...	8,498	982
18. Assam ...	5,000	42
19. Karnatak ...	3,720	533
20. Maharashtra ...	3,084	3,983
21. Himachal Pradesh ...	1,568	21
22. Bombay ...	614	...
Total ...	43,01,916	3,50,265

Total number of Villages donated : 1037

1. Bhoodan as seen by The West

(A collection of articles and Radio-Talks on Vinoba & Bhoodan by the friends of the West.)

Price 6 As.

2. Bhoodan to Gramdan

(Selected speeches of Acharya Vinoba since Puri Sarvodaya Sammelan.)

Price 6 As.

3. On World Peace—By Vinoba

Price 2 As.

4. Principles and Philosophy of Bhoodan

II-nd Edition

Price 5 As.

5. Revolutionary Bhoodan

III rd Edition

Price 6 As.

Apply to Sarvodaya Prachuralaya, Tanjore.